The true value of any yearbook probably won't be realized until years after its initial distribution. Someday you'll be cleaning out a bookshelf and you'll come across this copy of The Blue and Gray 75. That's when you should sit down and read every word of this book. For in the following pages is a story. It's a story about the memories of the 1974-75 school year. It's about the special things that happened in 1974 and 1975.

This year marked the fiftieth anniversary of Washington-Lee. This year more than ever things were happening in this school. There was the structure of Washington-Lee. With a four million dollar bond allowance, renovation and rebuilding plans were underway. Architects and blue prints and hammering and drilling were familiar sights and sounds this year. For the students, Open Campus privileges were introduced. Open Campus meant being allowed to leave the school during lunch and during unscheduled periods. Sophomores had to wait until the second semester before being granted off-campus privileges. However, this was a difficult clause to enforce and was virtually ignored by the administration. Even greater freedom was allowed to students with the privilege of smoking courts. In an effort to clear the air in the bathrooms, administrators, faculty and the school board approved the smoking court policy. If you had signed permission from your parents and if you attended a series of smoking seminars, you were allowed to go outside and smoke. Obviously, this presented problems in the winter and in the rain.

Also different this year was the absence of daily homerooms. No longer did students attend homeroom before first period to have attendance taken. Instead suffering, thinking.”

attendance was taken during first period. When time for necessary business, like elections, class business or distribution of the Crossed Sabres, an advisory period was scheduled after first period. No longer could students come late to school and not miss anything. If you were late for first period, 30 minutes detention was to be assigned.

The Blue and Gray itself changed this year. We've used a lot of writing in the 75 book. The staff has tried to present a true account of what happened to people this year. We want you to read this book and to understand the people in our school. No matter how diverse our school population may be we all share common ground in this school and in this community. The purpose of The Blue and Gray 75 is people . . . people sharing, enjoying, suffering and thinking. The staff asks you to read this book and hopefully you'll understand and remember what Washington-Lee was in 1974 and 1975.

Student Life

When the tension of school work seems to be getting you down, it's always nice to sit back and think about summer. Yes . . . summer, that nice, long period of vacation that never seems long enough. You could sleep in and stay out late. There was so much fun during the summer of 74! Ocean City and its neighboring east coast paradises were the refuge of many Washington-Lee students. Do you remember boardwalks, and ice cream cones and novelty tee-shirts and hot, gritty sand, and sore, lobster-red sunburns? There was cool, blue water and hunting for seashells and sailing and swimming and surfing and partying. It was a perfect surrounding for relaxation and fun. If you weren't lucky enough to make it to the beach, you could have relaxed at home. The habit of the great, All-American Teenager was to sleep in all morning, watch television all afternoon, and go out all night. In the evening you could take your fancy car to McDonald's to check up with your friends and find out where the party would be that night. On a special night you could go to a concert. 74 was the year of the comeback, with return concerts of The Beach Boys; Eric Clapton; Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young; and even Elvis Presley. Current favorites like Earth, Wind and Fire, The Grateful Dead and Marvin Gaye also made appearances in and around the Washington area. But a constant concert-goer perpetuates an expensive habit. Not only were the ticket prices outrageous, but so, too, was the cost of gasoline for the trip to the Capitol Center. Add to that the cost of beer for the newly eligible eighteen-year-olds, and the other things in which to indulge and you had quite an expensive evening's entertainment. To support the habit of summertime solace many were employed for the summer. Construction jobs brought in sizable paychecks for sizeable quantities of sweat. However, it was difficult for a female to enjoy or be employed in this kind of labor. Swimming pool lifeguards, or workers in fast-food restaurants were typical jobs. Also common were temporary office help or register clerks in stores. Most jobs were not career-minded but simply pastimes to bring in some extra cash in a time when prices climbed higher and higher every day. We cannot forget the turmoil of Watergate revelations throughout the summer. The shocking transcripts of a corrupt administration took its toll on a hot August afternoon when Richard M. Nixon resigned the office of the President. A feeling of relief, as one experiences when removing a heavy load, was felt by many people. Welcomed into the White House like a breath of clean air, was Gerald Ford. He started a "Honeymoon" with Congress and brought a new earthiness and family atmosphere into the mansion on Pennsylvania Avenue. His 17-year-old daughter, Susan, swore never to give up her blue jeans and probably enjoyed many of the same things that any student of Washington-Lee would enjoy. She had a special summer in 74, but, then, didn't everyone?

Getting ready for the "Three R's"

After the fourth of July you suddenly realized that in another nine weeks you'd be back to the same old grind of schoolwork. For some it was a depressing thought. For others, the thought of football games and dances and seeing all your friends was exciting and something to look forward to. The thought of school and brisk, fall weather can be uplifting when you're working in 98 degrees and 70% humidity. Praise should go to all those who had to go out and work in the hot sun on the gridiron. Many long hours were spent running and panting in football practice long before school started. Shorts and halters were the order of the day for cheerleaders who got together to perfect their yelling voices and rhythmic chants. Drill team members and majorettes also started working on their routines while getting uniforms ordered, organized and distributed. Sour chords of music were struck in marching band while practicing to make perfect before the first game. Slowly but surely that "first day of school" was approaching and few were going to get caught without being ready. In that last week or two before the grind began, an effort was made to cram a complete summer's fun into a few short days. There were a few details that had to be attended to before school started. There is something about crisp, new sheets of paper and long, sharp pencils that is rather fun. Notebooks, paper and pencils had to be purchased and due to the paper shortage they were more expensive this year than ever before. No one can show up the first day of school without a new outfit. So summertime paychecks were put into new wardrobes to impress everyone back at school. When the fateful day finally arrived and the doors opened for the flood of a new year's students, there was a certain excitement in the air. It's a certain feeling that can only be felt by someone going back on "the first day of school."

“ . . . It's almost like lighting a firecracker with a long fuse. You try to prepare yourself for the blast, but it still catches you by surprise.”

What's in a name?

It's a few minutes before eight on a typical morning at Washington-Lee. Groups of students stand around gossiping. Looking down the hallways, one can see streamers and signs decorating the athletes' lockers. The lockers close with a bang as students rush to get to class.

Student A: Better hurry up or you'll be late for class.

Student B: Who cares if I'm late for homeroom? My homeroom teacher won't notice.

Student A: Maybe not since you're not going to homeroom.

Student B: I'm not going to homeroom, huh?

Student A: Of course not. If this were last year you'd be going to homeroom, but it's this year so you're not.

Student B: I'm not?

Student A: No.

Student B: (frustrated) Then where am I going?

Student A: Right now you're going to first period but if you want to know what happened to homeroom, you go there after first period but it's not homeroom.

Student B: It's not homeroom?

Student A: No.

Student B: Then what is it?

Student A: It's "advisory period."

Student B: What's an "advisory period"?

Student A: The same thing as homeroom but it doesn't happen as often.

Student B: But you just said it wasn't homeroom.

Student A: Well, it's just that you're not allowed to call it homeroom anymore 'cause it's called advisory period and you don't have a homeroom teacher, you have an advisor. But basically it's the same thing. It's where you go to take care of all your business and stuff.

As the two students talk, the hall is getting quiet and people are drifting into the rooms of their first period classes.

Student B: Okay, so I have to go to first period. Oh, my God, that's at the other end of the school! See ya!

The sound of clomping footsteps echoes down the hall. The bell rings as a rushing figure turns the corner.

New freedom for students!

A reprint from the first issue of the Crossed Sabres.

A New Privilege, Will it Survive?

by Allison Linehan

Local newspapers have carried stories about it, the loudspeaker has mentioned it almost every day since the beginning of school. Open Campus is here!

Open Campus means that students who want to leave school grounds during lunch or unscheduled time are allowed to do so with parental permission.

The W-L Administration feels that with 50 minutes for lunch the student body should be given the opportunity to leave school grounds. Mr. Long said that he thinks the students will "make it work" and Mr. Ness, agreeing with him, said, "Open campus is here to stay . . ." They feel that W-L's student body is responsible enough to go out and be back for 5th period on time.

Some students say that by taking advantage of Open Campus it's hard to be back in time for 5th period. Others think the lunch period should be an hour and a half long.

Despite complaints like the above, Open Campus does give students time to study, be among friends, get extra help from teachers, and get rid of frustrations and the feelings of imprisonment that the unbroken school day can build up.

The only complaint the administration has had about open campus is from W-L neighbors. They have commented upon the throwing of trash in their yards, and upon people running around in their front yards.

Students have got to respect the rights of these people, and as long as they stay off of private property and quit "hanging on the corners" as Mr. Ness put it, "it's here to stay!"

THE GREAT EAT-IN

Lunch lines at W-L hit record lengths as the two lunch periods of previous years were combined into a single, longer lunch period. Because of Open Campus a substantial drop in the number of students eating lunch in the W-L cafeteria was expected. The drop, however, was not enough to compensate for the fact that all the students were eating at once — hence the longer lines.

The existing cafeteria is scheduled to be demolished as part of the reconstruction plan. Eating facilities will be moved to other parts of the building. The kitchen and cafeteria staff will be replaced by a variety of vending machines.

WHAT PEOPLE WILL DO. . .

The annual donkey basketball game, held in the gym, provided fun and enjoyment for a large crowd. Of the teams, two were of students and two were of faculty members. The prize was a large trophy. In the semifinals, one student team and one faculty team won. The student team won the trophy, which was accepted by Jeff Smith.

The sophomore class decided that it was low on money, so it sold some of its assets. Sophomores could be purchased at the Sophomore Auction. On "Slave Day," the sophomores' "masters" could make their "slaves" clean out their lockers, carry their books, or wear the costume of their choice (within the dress code, of course). Slaves were seen wearing tuxedos, marching band jackets, Mickey Mouse ears, and other diverse articles of clothing.

GENERALS BITE BURGERS

Vandalism was the prelude to Washington-Lee's homecoming game with the Yorktown Patriots. Although animosity between the schools extended to only a small portion of the student bodies, considerable damage was done. W-L was clearly the worst offender, having committed the first and the worst offenses.

The exchange started when a few W-L students toilet-papered a tree at Yorktown. Yorktown students, in return, spray-painted a back door to W-L. The W-L vandals then decorated the Yorktown sidewalks.

Next, a group of Yorktown girls

Painted W-L's front doors, the surrounding walls and sidewalks, and several windows. They toilet-papered the large evergreen trees facing Quincy Street, and they dug a large hole in the football field. Written in weed killer on the football field was an unfinished, "York —".

The next day, when school officials learned of the damage, a campaign was begun to ease tension and discourage vandalism. The W-L senior class president visited Yorktown as the Yorktown football team captains visited W-L. But the night after the exchange, Yorktown was heavily damaged. The front doors were painted blue and gray, top to bottom; a long wall was riddled with graffiti over its entire length. A few windows were broken, and many more were spray-painted, and paint had gotten onto inside walls through the broken windows. "W-L" was written in weed killer on the football field, and the goal posts were torn to the ground. The planned exchange of students had taken place uselessly — too late to prevent cancellation of the pre-game bonfire. During lunch, a procession of Yorktown students in cars passed with an effigy of a General dangling above a garbage truck. Rocks were then thrown at the cars.

The homecoming game itself ended favorably for the Generals, who won, 14-6. After winning the toss, the Generals chose to receive first. Yorktown kicked off, but a W-L drive failed, and the Generals were forced to punt. Immediately, Yorktown fumbled the ball, and W-L recovered. But another W-L drive failed, and astonishingly, Yorktown fumbled the ball after the punt! Mike Bradford then ran twenty-five yards to the goal line and fumbled. The ball rolled into the end zone and Brett Payne dove on it, scoring the game's first touch-down. The extra point was good, and W-L kicked off. Each team drove unsuccessfully until the end of the quarter.

The second quarter consisted of unsuccessful drives by both teams. Yorktown came close to scoring twice, and W-L once. The half ended with the score 7-0.

W-L kicked off to start the second half. Each team drove to no avail, until a deep pass allowed Yorktown to score. The extra point was blocked.

The score was 7-6. Then Bradford scored a touchdown to put the Generals out of reach. The extra point was good.

A semi-formal Homecoming Dance (Who said teens wear only jeans?) was underway the next night in the cafeteria when the Homecoming Royalty were announced: Nancy Weyforth and Jeff Smith. Cape Horn, the band, was "really good."

Eating, The Old-Fashioned Way

The American Civilization classes held a gala 19th century luncheon shortly before Christmas vacation. Food was plentiful — there were two turkeys, as well as an assortment of 19th century vegetables, desserts, and drinks. The Madrigals, singing authentic 19th Century Christmas carols, provided the entertainment; the decor and food were prepared by student committees. Scrupulous detail was paid to authenticity — only one event broke the atmosphere: the Madrigals' special rendition of "Country Roads" for Mr. Wyatt.

Each and every year that W-L is in session, students are faced with the problem of getting to and from school. Each mode of transportation has its advantages. Riding the bus is the most common method, but driving is the most convenient. Walking is the healthiest, but bicycling is the most efficient. For a student who lives inside the 1½ mile minimum busing radius, walking at a moderate 3 miles per hour, it takes less than 30 minutes to get to school. Riding the bus often takes more time than this. And if a student wishes to jog at, say, 6 miles per hour, he will beat the bus almost every time. Snow is sometimes a handicap, to cars, although everyone is glad when it shortens school. Snowball throwers and slush are the main obstacles to walkers, while ice patches, next to the taxicab and the Metrobus, are a bicyclist's worst enemies.

WHAT GOES UP MUST

In February, fifty years and three months after its completion, the greater part of the 1924 wing of Washington-Lee was scheduled to be demolished to make way for a brand new, four million dollar addition to W-L. The new building, to be completed in 1976, will make it possible to use both traditional and modern teaching techniques.

The new facility will be perpendicular to the existing building that is, parallel and somewhat recessed from Stafford Street. Although the buses will still arrive at the Quincy Street entrance, there will be large doors facing Staffor Street.

The new W-L will be organized by departments. Every department but Math will have a large study area and several classrooms. The Math Department asked specifically that the large study area be deleted. The classrooms will make it possible to continue to use the present "conservative" teaching methods; the large area will make it possible to use "liberal" independent study and large-group assembly techniques.

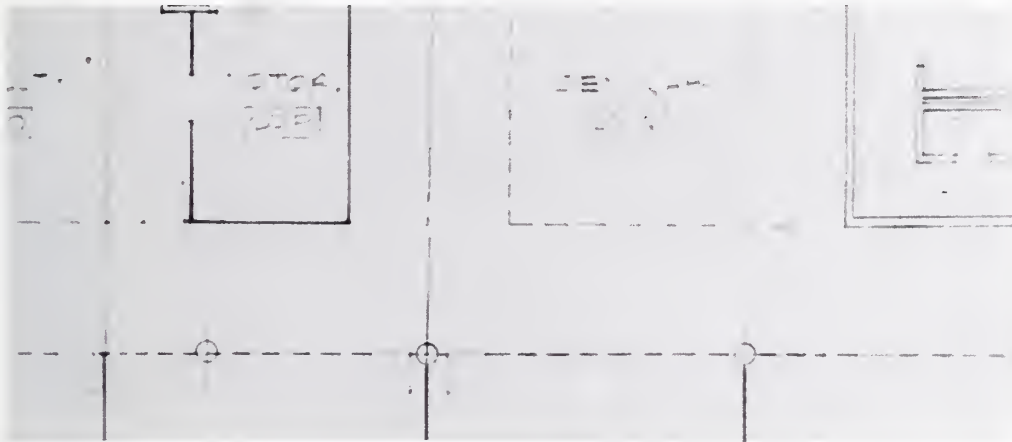

Although there will be fewer classrooms, there will be more academic spaces because more seminar, conference rooms, study areas, and the like are to be included in the addition. The classrooms will be substantially bigger than the present ones, but there is less total floor area — considerable corridor space has been removed.

Furthermore, the new part of the building will be fully air-conditioned and each room will have its own temperature control.

The library, central to the new building, will be close to all of the departments which use it regularly.

COME DOWN

Lockers in the new building will all be located in one area, so that students will not have to walk a half mile between periods. Next to the locker concourse will be the new, carpeted cafeteria, one-third the size of the present cafeteria, but still ample. Both hot and cold foods will be served. The new commons will be in the space originally planned for the new little theatre, which has been deleted. The old Little Theatre, however, has not been touched.

During the construction, classes formerly held in the part of the building that was demolished, were moved to other classrooms. Dramatic productions were held in the Little Theatre at the end of the year, since the auditorium was no longer being used. Students dined during the end of the year in the old band and chorus rooms. W-L in 1975 was not what it was in 1974!

Mr. Howard Long feels the walls closing in on him as the new construction is about to begin.

Leaders of the Pack

Dear Seniors:

Although you may not realize it, you will be entering your adult lives at a time when very profound changes have shaken the foundations of our society. These changes have seen the passing of a long-established approach to the organization of authority. Changes are evident in grassroots participation in decision making, in the growing strength of employee organizations and in the emasculation of traditional authority concepts. Some have called it the new permissiveness and some the new freedoms. It depends on your point of view. The question that will need to be answered by your generation is whether you can exercise the self restraint needed to maintain the efficiency and singleness of purpose necessary to sustain our way of life. If the prevailing mood continues to be one of everyone for himself, then we shall be approaching the twilight of a free society. I hope you will have the will and the idealism to persevere.

An Inside Look . . .

What does a teacher do at 3:00 p.m. when he is free to leave the classroom? Well, he may go home to mark papers, he may stick around school for a club meeting, or he may relax and pursue a non-school-related interest. T.V.'s Lucas Tanner did a lot for humanizing teachers, and the following information proves that W-L's faculty includes some "real people," too.

Mr. Tim Wyatt is a college football fan and uses "an excellent rating system," the formula of which he devised himself. He is also "very interested in the folklore, songs, girls, and tradition of West Virginia."

Biology students watch out! Miss Kathy Klotz is studying psychic phenomena! She also is taking piano, flute, and cello lessons yet still finds the time to be her own auto mechanic.

Another music lover is Mr. Francis Imbrescia. His favorite past-time is carrying on intellectual discussions but claims he is unable to do so with his students.

Mr. Tom Armstrong is an outdoor man — a camper and a fisherman. Few people at W-L know about Mr. Armstrong's other hobby: he is a tenor in the Nightcap Barbershop Quartet.

Captain Snowden Arthur is the Vice-President of Washington Friends of Buddhism. He loves to read but his library is so large now that every time he gets a new book his wife makes him get rid of an old one.

A few examples of how they spend their spare time suggests that teachers are really human after all!

GETTING THE BUGS OUT

One is only partially aware of the work and effort that the guidance department puts in to make our students conscious of the present and of the future. The counselors lend a guiding hand and help students to make important decisions, decisions which become the foundation for the future. Many times their efforts go unnoticed. We rely on them; they are people whom we can lean on and whom we can talk to.

Night . . . sleep, sleep . . . dream. How often we find these words relating! Dreams during slumber, written by my subconscious, in the morning make me feel like an audience. But the day is also meant for dreaming; and during the day I can consciously create my dream. I become kind of like da Vinci painting the Mona Lisa, and an eagle soaring across the sky. Daydreaming is an art! There is no telling what it may lead to. So please, kind teacher, next time you see me apparently dozing off in the middle of a Shakesperian quotation or a geometric theory, have a heart let an artist be . . .

Prepare For Your Career . . .

The unfinished Career Center opened this past September.

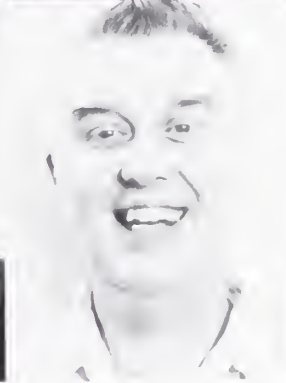

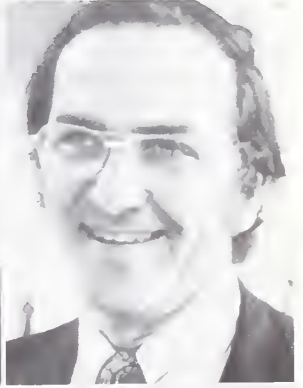

Tom Smallwood chooses awkward positions to do his homework!

The $4.6 million Technical Education Career Center, although not completed, opened this past September. Labor problems, such as the concrete workers strike, delayed its completion so only seven of the twenty-one courses offered were taught in the new building. The remaining classes were taught in the old Patrick Henry Elementary School.

The purpose of the career center is to offer students an opportunity to prepare for a career without a college education. Courses offered in construction, auto mechanics, air conditioning, cosmetology, ornamental horticulture, practical nursing, food service, dictation, and more, hopefully reached this goal.

Students who attended the career center this year felt that the program has been very successful and really enjoyed going. They felt more independent and felt as though they were doing something truly worthwhile.

TWO-WAY TUNE-UP

Plato says that the purpose of education is to give to the mind and to the body all the beauty and all the perfection of which they are capable. Consequently, it should not be forgotten that W-L takes pride in the students and not merely in the new premises, and that W-L is what the students make of it by participating in outdoor games and scrutinizing their books. Without either one, the other cannot exist.

As a result, along with the typical W-L spirit and enthusiasm to crown it all, everyone has been involved with sports and studies in some way. Many teachers held classes outdoors when the hot spell came along, with the motto that "all work and no play is good for nothing." As Mrs. Causey once claimed, "A healthy mind needs a healthy body." And a healthy mind is usually a happy one.

All Aboard!

Breaking away from the classroom bores!

Debbie Scorzelli found this field trip to a beauty salon to be very unusual.

Field trips have always been a popular means of teaching, at least from the students' point of view. One reason is, of course, because of their educational value. Students are brought into contact with concrete examples of their current studies and the text book information is brought to life. Seeing an original painting or watching a newspaper being made makes it easier for the student to understand the processes.

Field trips also provide an opportunity for students to get the full advantage of visiting the historical, cultural, and modern attractions in the area which they may not normally be able to see.

But everyone knows that maybe the main reason for the popularity of field trips is the break they give from the monotony of day after day spent in the classroom.

Many students took advantage of their one chance to visit The Mormon Temple.

Social Studies

"A place equipped for experimental study in a science or for testing and analysis . . ." This is the definition of "laboratory" given in the Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary. Yet the labs of W-L mean much more. They mean groups of students working together and cooperating with each other to learn something new.

Dissecting frogs in Biology, and mixing ghastly formulas to produce an even stranger and product in Chemistry are examples of what goes on in science labs. But W-L now has a math lab, not to mention the language labs. Head phones, puzzles, games, etc. are all lab experiences to W-L students.

TAKING

Marty Hill: I am an instructor at Fun & Fitness Health Club. I plan weight programs for individuals, and instruct in the use of the Nautilus equipment. The Nautilus machines are the most scientifically advanced weight machines in the world. I am also required, by the club, to work out a few hours each week.

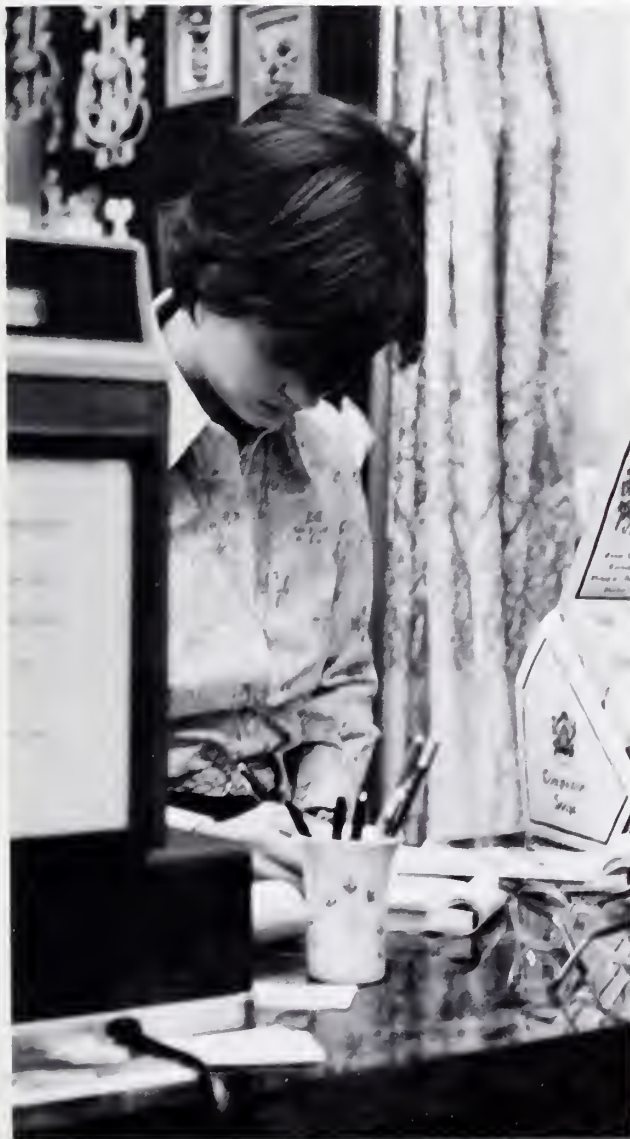

Getting involved, business, and people is what Distributive Education is all about. D.E. is a co-op program, it involves about five hours of classroom instruction and about 15 of on-the-job training per week, plus a credit for each. The class consists of a carefree atmosphere, with a lot of discussion and many group activities. D.E. students enjoy good jobs in places like retail stores, health clubs, car dealers, drug stores, supermarkets, restaurants, laboratories, and many other places. The instructors, Mrs. Rosalie Arnold, and Mr. Boyd Hargraves share a very close relationship with the kids, and everyone always has a good time.

As a Golden Jubilee Special, Mrs. Jeanne Gilman, one of W-L's energetic Art teachers, was determined to offer students three brand new courses at whatever cost. The costs were high, and as Mrs. Gilman claimed, "My dark problem is finance." Yet, thanks to many fund raising projects, W-L could, after fifty years, welcome into it's curriculum new Photo Silk Screen, Visual Design (Photography) and Commercial Design II courses. While the Photo Silk Screen Students busied themselves learning the basic principles of Silk Screen, and the Commercial Design students "slaved" to make the school calendars for the Senior Class Bazaar, the Visual Design students, on their part, were let lose with simple yet effective home-made camaras to take perspective pictures. Everybody in these classes had a busy time, and the credit goes to Mrs. Gilman.

"Well, what can I say! The service is good, the prices are low, and occasionally it's a nice place to visit." But seriously, the W-L clinic under the direction of head nurse Mrs. Evalyn J. Taylor, is a great asset to the school and its student body. The nurse and her aide are well rounded professionals; not only do they take care of bruised knees and swollen fingers, but they also mend hearts and give some pretty sound advice. They give free medical check ups and tests for work permits, and help to fill out all the forms. All of us have at one time or another been to that cozy little room on the second floor but in case you haven't, try it some time. It's a real experience.

OPINION

Newspaper Gets Brand New Look

Dear Students,

Did you get a pleasant surprise when you received the Crossed Sabres this morning? We on the newspaper staff hope you did. We have changed both the style and the design of the Crossed Sabres this year to make it a newspaper that the whole school will enjoy reading. We hope we have succeeded, and we welcome your suggestions for further improvements.

The new Crossed Sabres is technically no longer a newspaper; it is a newsmagazine. As a newsmagazine the Crossed Sabres will be eight to twelve small pages in length instead of the four large pages of the past. The first page will be a cover page with a picture on it. Feature articles will be on pages 2-4, editorials on page 5, sports on pages 6 and 7, and news on page 8.

Because the old Crossed Sabres was published monthly, much of the news printed in it was already known by the time the paper came out. The new Crossed Sabres will continue to be published monthly. This year, though, the news will be written from a feature angle. This means that instead of rehashing facts in a story that everyone already knows, we will focus on various aspects of the news. This will keep the news fresh and current. We are not abandoning straight news reporting, however. Important news facts will be found on page 8 and sports scores will be in the sports scoreboard.

Why has the Crossed Sabres changed so much? The answer is simple. Any school newspaper that isn't read and enjoyed by the students is a failure. Last year's Crossed Sabres was a failure. This year's Crossed Sabres won't be. This year we are going to write about you, the students—the things you are doing and the things about which you are concerned. We will keep you informed and interested.

Back in 1924, Arlington County opened its first public high school — Washington-Lee. The new building had 18 classrooms, two laboratories, a gym, a cafeteria, an auditorium, and a library with an additional building for shop work. Since then, W-L has undergone many changes, and with reconstruction plans under way, will incur many more.

The school population of 1925 was 600 students and 22 teachers. The first graduate of W-L, Bailey Byars, had to receive his diploma from George Mason High School as W-L did not receive its accreditation until 1926. It has maintained high academic standards ever since.

As Arlington grew throughout the thirties and forties the school population grew and there was a need for a larger school. Some renovations were made then with even greater additions made in the 1950's

The late fifties and early sixties brought great numbers of students to Washington-Lee. The largest number of students at W-L ever, was close to 3,000. (This year there are 1,600.) To accommodate this great number of students, some classes had to be conducted in the hallways and store rooms. Finally, new Arlington high schools — Wakefield and Yorktown — helped to relieve this overpopulation.

Throughout all the changes and additions, however, the spirit of W-L has remained strong. Some have said that W-L is "uptight" and over-traditional, but it is the traditions of W-L that have kept it strong. The traditional atmosphere has maintained students and faculty through the greatest and most trying changes. There must always be somebody or something to maintain W-L's traditions through these changes. Structural change should never adversely affect the spirit and leadership of Washington-Lee.

MEMORIES OF  NINETEEN-TWENTY-FIVE

Top: Washington-Lee High School as it appeared in central Arlington in 1927. Left: People and styles have changed since 1925, as this page from an old yearbook clearly shows. Right: Six types of instruments — banjos, trumpet, saxophone, violin, piano and drums — played by seven musicians, made the first school orchestra.

THE ORCHESTRA

HISTORICAL WASHINGTON-LEE . . .

Top left: 1975 marked the beginning of a new era for women's libbers. After much discussion, girls were finally allowed to have varsity sports — like basketball, softball and cross country. After looking back to the 1927 girls' varsity basketball squad, it seems the only thing new about the idea is the uniform. Top right: Cadet Corps for both boys and girls were common place organizations throughout the thirties and forties. Middle left: The International Club of the late 1940's had to import foreign students in exchange programs. Today's International Club strives to improve relations among the great variety of foreign students now enrolled in the school. Middle right: Underclassmen of the early fifties were pictured in groups of their homerooms, rather than the individual pictures that are now shown. Bottom left: Short hair and wide lapels were the fashion for him, while pearls and lace were the fashion for her at the Sweetheart Ball of the early fifties. Bottom right: Senior class officers of the same era took a fun approach and dressed-up look for their class business.

A SCHOOL OF TRADITION . . .

AND CHANGE

Far left; Top and Bottom: Back in fifties the Sock Hop was all the rage. The biggest sock hop of the year was highlighted with decorated socks and the coronation of King and Queen Argyle. Penny loafers and saddle shoes were left behind for jitterbugging in fancy feet. Top: The biggest rivalry in the fifties was with George Washington, where a caravan of fans make their way to the competition for the "Old Oaken Bucket" trophy. Middle: The costumes have changed for the majorettes, but their talent is just as good now as it was then. Bottom: Thin ties, Peter Pan collars, and short, short hair are the order of the day for Senior Class officers of the sixties.

Unique Happenings of 1974-75

JERRY FORD AND NELSON ROCKEFELLER APPOINTED TO PRESIDENCY AND VICE PRESIDENCY * MUHAMMAD ALI NAMED ATHLETE OF YEAR

Just like any other year there were certain events in 1974-75 that made it unique. The events in our school, in the community, and in the world affected the thoughts and actions of Washington-Lee students.

One of the most controversial issues this year was school board action to remove our principal O.U. Johansen. The school board wanted to move him to an administrative position supervising federally funded programs in the county. Intense school and community protest was in vain as the school board refused to reverse its decision. As this book goes to press the Arlington Association of School

* CAR COMPANIES GAVE AWAY MONEY TO SELL CARS * DEMOCRATIC LANDSLIDE IN CONGRESSIONAL ELECTIONS * UNEMPLOYMENT AND

As if the destruction and construction wasn't enough around school, people also had to put up with Metro construction throughout Washington and Arlington. The business district of Clarendon was totally changed as buildings came down, among them J.C. Penneys and Clarendon Bank and Trust, so that the subway could come through.

The biggest fad this year was the "Toe Sock." Bright and multi-colored socks with individual toes had to be worn with open shoes to best show off the tiny, twinkling toes.

Administrators and Supervisors has filed a suit against the board on the basis of age discrimination. As a reason for the transfer the school board gave two reasons — that Mr. Johansen was a few years away from retirement and that the school was undergoing reconstruction.
